NALSAR, University of Law - A Growth Profile

Starting from scratch and creating an institution of excellence on a 50 acre undulated land located on the outskirts of the city within a period of less than a decade has been a self-satisfying and significant accomplishments

Established under the NALSAR University Act, 1998 (AP Act 34 of 1998) the University made sustained progress not only in creating an ambience for serious intellectual endeavour but also made great strides in the process of developing an institution of excellence recognized both at the national and international levels.

Starting to impart a five year integrated B.A., LL.B.(Hons.) degree programme in December 1998, under semester pattern of study, the University added a two year Masters Degree programme and Ph. D degree programme from the years 1999 and 2004 respectively. Assembling a competent Faculty with a sense of commitment to discharge the onerous responsibilities in raising standards of the academic programmes has been a significant effort in the beginning. During the nine years of its existence, it has produced 245 Graduates, 24 Post Graduates and Two Ph.D Degree holders. Besides, the University embarked in 2002 on a much needed Proximate Education programme (Distance Education learning) offering diplomas of one year duration in Cyber Laws, Patent Laws, Media Laws, International Humanitarian Law and Insurance Law knowledge acquisitions in which areas of study was in great demand. So far, 345 diploma holders have been produced which has reasonably met the growing demand of these personnel with specialized expertise.

On the research front, the University has undertaken several important research projects with the financial support from World Bank, Central and State Governments. Also the University's support and contributions in developing legislative Bills have been substantial.

The University has entered into MoUs with over 10 foreign Universities in U.K., USA, Australia, Canada, and Israel for exchange of students and faculty, besides undertaking collaborative research work and to organize international conferences/seminars for mutual benefit.

As regards the physical facilities and infrastructural development, the University has made enviable and unparalleled progress, with the financial support extended by the State Government, UGC and other philanthropic individuals. These facilities include administrative building, library and internet complex, six hostel units for Boys and Girls with a common dining hall, VC Residence, Guest House, Faculty/Staff quarters (24), a Stadium, SAARCLAW building with a Moot Court Hall and a Conference Hall with Video conferencing facility, and Teachers convention centre with conference halls and fully furnished 24 rooms.

National Law University, Delhi - Rising from a nascent stage

National Law University, Delhi has been established in 2008 by Act No.1 of 2008 of National Capital Territory of Delhi and with the initiative of High Court of Delhi is another Law University in the list of premier law Universities established in India.
